

Student Worker Testimonial

What do you enjoy most about your role in ISG?

The most rewarding part of my role is the work environment and accessibility! I not only get to engage and participate in dynamic, behind-the-scenes projects but also interact with and learn from a community of skilled professionals.

What made you apply for the role?

Throughout my high school years, I had garnered an interest in the editorial field and have worked across several school journals and newspapers since then. For me, this role provided a chance to culminate, develop and expand on these interests in a new, professional landscape!

Stuti Agnihotri - Editorial Intern
Studying - English Literature

What thing(s) do you think helped your written application/interview to be successful?

I found it was helpful to respond transparently to requirements listed in the criteria by reusing keywords while contextualizing the needed skills within your own experiences. I'd also encourage treating the interview as an encouraging opportunity to discuss your experience and interests rather than an overly-formal, daunting meeting!

What advice would you give to other students who are considering applying for a role in ISG?

I would advise you to go for it! Roles in ISG help you strike a healthy balance between your personal, professional and academic lives and are highly accommodating of university schedules and commitments so you are able to grow holistically without burning out.

Why should students apply for roles in ISG?

In my work as an intern, I find ISG to be an ideal starting point for students venturing into the workforce. It provides the security of working within the familiar world and structure of the University while introducing you to the dynamic, inner-workings of a large system where your contributions as an intern often interact with and impact student life – including your own!